Hi Beth –

I am responding to your request that I conduct a supplemental search of my non-email electronic records and my hardcopy records.

I searched my computer hard-drive and did not identify any potentially responsive documents. I do not use sharepoint or onedrive to save files. I do not use personal email to conduct agency business and do not have any responsive documents on my personal email account. I do not have any text messages or voicemails with responsive information.

I also searched through my paper files, including my working files organized by subject as well as loose documents on my desk that have not yet been organized into subject matter files and my personal notes. I located one potentially responsive document, which is attached. I received this document in conjunction with a January 2018 briefing for the Administrator, and it includes my personal notes that reflect my mental impressions of the discussion and do not represent any official agency policy or decision. Let me know if you have any questions or need anything else from me. Thanks.

Byron – I think it's all related. It's different FOIA requests so I think the searches are slightly different.

I received a similar email from R10 this afternoon. I assume it's the same request?

Byron – can you search your paper documents, including paper phone logs and schedules, and non-email electronically stored information (meaning documents or information that are stored electronically but are not contained in emails) for documents responsive to the request below? If you could let me know by Monday that would be great.

Byron Brown
